HORRORS FOR ERITREAN REFUGEES CONTINUE IN THE SINAI

Despite Efforts by Egyptian Army Units to Crack Down on Bedouin Atrocities,
More and More Cases of Torture and Organ Theft Are Emerging

September 10, 2011

As Eritreans continue to flee their homeland in search of a life free from oppression and servitude, many choose a path to the west, into The Sudan. Some are seeking perceived availability of refuge in Israel, others to just go anywhere, be it in Sudan, Libya, or on to Europe – any place where they may have a chance at a reasonably civilized life.

Typically, the “migrants” are met along the way in Sudan, even before getting to Kessala, the first city from the Eritrean border, by parasitic, torturous groups of uncontrolled Rashaida, who through either promises of safe passage or by kidnapping, begin a series of hand-offs, one group to another, while extorting impossible sums of money from the victims. Eventually, the captives are sold to Egyptian Bedouins who continue the extortion, which is done by threats and torture to force the victim to reveal contact information of relatives or others in other countries, to send ransom to a complicit third party.

Hundreds of refugees have been held captive in Bedouin enclaves, where they are tortured, extorted, and abused. Once of no continuing value for extortion, some become victims of organ theft, conducted by complicit doctors in mobile units.

For years, dead bodies of refugees have been found dumped in the north of Sinai, sometimes with organs removed. Target organs are the liver, kidney and cornea.

The New Generation Foundation for Human Rights, reports this week that more and more refugee bodies are being found with organs removed, and that on almost every day, 4 to 6 new corpses are found. As part of his work, Mr Hamdy Azazy of New Generation Foundation assists personally in looking after the bodies and preparing them for burial. This often includes obtaining official permits for burial, such as this one for an anonymous victim:

Mr Hamdy also reports that it appears quite certain that an Israeli general is complicit in an organ theft and sale operation, working with Israeli and Egyptian Bedouins.

The cost transportation and preparation of each body for burial is US$160. Donations are needed through the donation page on the NGS web site:
